Dad Retires

John Ponsetto, Commissioner of Water Resources and Environmental Engineering, presents a Certificate of Merit to Willard Farnham at his retirement party held at the Lobster Pot in Montpelier recently.

Farnham Heads for Retirement

MONTPELIER — A familiar face in Vermont State Government is missing. With 35 years of service behind him, Willard B. Farnham has taken up the more prosaic pursuits of a well-earned retirement.

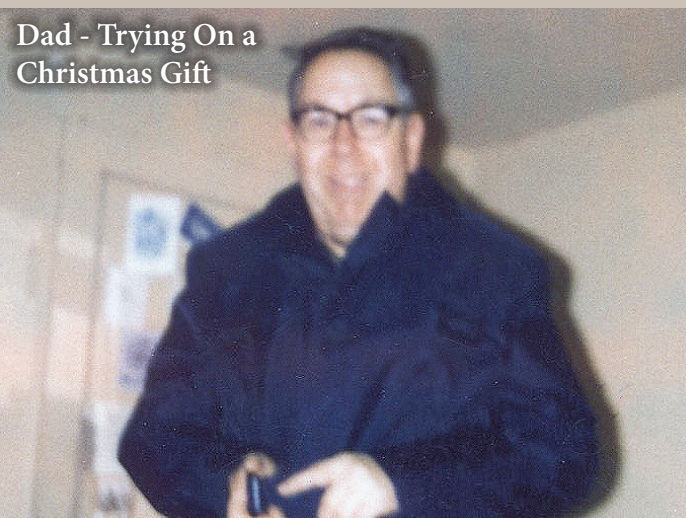

Willard joined the Health Department back in 1945 as chief chemist. He became Water Resources Lab Chief in 1962 and then put in a short stint as Industrial Waste Engineer. Since 1970 he's administered the State Pollution Abatement Permit Program.

Willard isn't planning to sink too far back into that retirement rocking chair. He's a lay minister and does a lot of preaching at several churches; is a 33rd Degree Mason and is heavily involved in Masonic activities and is married with five children.

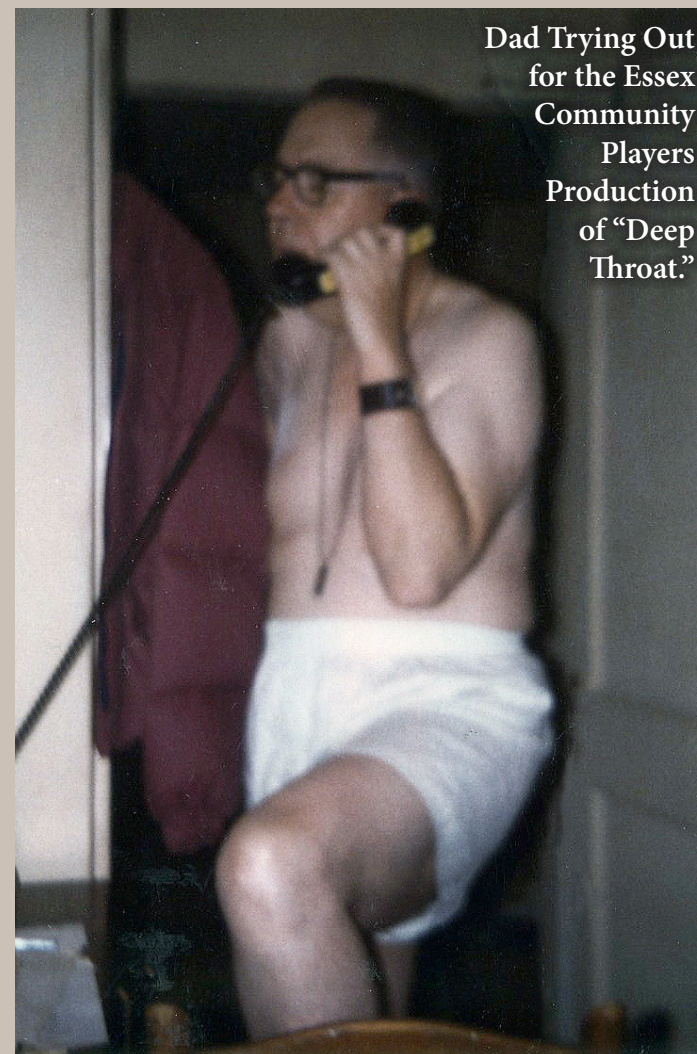

Good luck Willard, and have a happy retirement!
